THE GOOD SHIP DOVE

BY FLORENCE WARDEN.

(ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.)

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

ON went Todd into his own car, and straight to the neighbourhood of the docks.

He had been furnished with a good description of the man, and had no doubt that it was that of the servant who had been seen in the window of the house at the docks.

Every little piece of the puzzle was falling into place, and Todd felt confident that before long he would be able, without raising a scandal, to offer Daphne a surprise, complete in all its parts, as would convince her that all his past actions were the result of a desperate and desperate love.

Todd found Moss easily enough. That gentleman had given himself a holiday while he was spending partly in driving about the neighbourhood in the new dogcart, and partly in lounging about the quarter of the town where he was best known, showing himself off in his new clothes, and making a great show with his money without spending much of it.

Todd came up with Moss in a popular bar, where the Jew was sitting, but sat rather on one side, and a whisky and soda before him.

But whisky did not make the little Jew dangerous to Todd.

It was easy enough to get into conversation with him, and Todd was not averse to the company of the horse's driver.

But when from the horse Todd ventured upon more interesting topics, Moss became reticent.

"I think I've not you somewhere," said Todd. "Perhaps you have not acquainted."

"I'm not sure," said Moss. "I'm not sure."

"I mentioned a club of good standing in the town, where Moss would not, as he knew, have been allowed on the steps."

Moss replied that he was not much of a club man, and did not think it necessary to add that a club was as far as he had ever got.

"Not at the club? Then perhaps we have met at some house in the neighbourhood?"

"You know the Mansions? Or the Jarringtons? Or the Rednairs?"

Moss shook his head to each name. But Todd saw that, at the mention of the last, there came a change over the cunning little fellow's face.

"You don't know the Rednairs?" persisted Todd. "I thought every one knew Mr. Luke Rednair, the ship-owner?"

"Oh, I know him by name, of course," admitted Moss. "But I thought you meant to say that I knew him as a friend."

"Then it can't have been at his house that I've met you," went on Todd, as he spoke, rather anxiously at the act he was committing in conceding to prove this comfortable conversation for information which he was determined to get.

"No," said Moss. "It can't have been there. I'm not much of a society man."

"Wait a moment. I'm not sure of it," said Todd. "I'm not sure of it."

"I'm not sure of it," said Todd. "I'm not sure of it."

NEW GERMAN ATTACK

A 10-MILE FRONT

The Germans have made a fresh attack between Armentieres and the La Bassée Canal.

The enemy infantry advanced along portions of a ten-mile front and captured several villages.

Sir Douglas Haig reports that the British are holding the enemy on both flanks.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

LONDON, April 10. Sir Douglas Haig reports that the morning after an enemy bombardment from the La Bassée Canal in the neighbourhood of Armentieres, strong hostile forces attacked the British and Portuguese holding this sector. A thick mist made observation impossible. The enemy forced his way into positions near Neuve Chapelle, Valenciennes, and La Valenciennes farm. After heavy fighting all day long the enemy forced back the Portuguese in the centre and the British on the flanks of the line on the Lys River between Estaires and Bas St. Maur.

We held our positions on both flanks about Valenciennes and Fleurbaix, where the enemy was repulsed in heavy fighting. The enemy has captured Richebourg, St. Vanne, and Laventie. Severe fighting continued along the whole of this front. We secured prisoners southward of Armentieres in minor engagements.

Our advance elements, in accordance with orders, withdrew to previously organised positions south-west of the lower course of the Lys, and south of Conchy-le-Château. The enemy troops, which we incessantly bombarded, lost heavily during this operation.

GERMAN CLAIMS.

A German official report states: We have captured Valenciennes, Landrethun, and Conchy-le-Château. The enemy lost 250 men during the fighting. We have captured 1000 prisoners. The enemy troops, which we incessantly bombarded, lost heavily during this operation.

ENDING THE WAR.

A Copenhagen message says that "Vorwärts," commenting on President Wilson's speech, says: If Germany does not finish the war by military means her future will be in darkness.

It will not look bright even if we succeed in finishing the war during the spring or summer. Therefore there is no other solution than a complete victory.

The "New York Herald" Washington correspondent says that official dispatches state that a mass meeting of Czechs held in Prague denounced Count Czernin, and approved of President Wilson's speech.

The "Daily News" states that the convention of the House of Commons passed a resolution in favour of continuing the war in the event of a general armistice.

LATE WAR NEWS.

BITTER STRUGGLE.

FOR GIVENCHY AND HANGARD.

LONDON, April 10.

The Bavarians twice took Givenchy. Twice they were bayoneted out and beaten back. The Germans held the village and the high ground.

The French had a sanguinary encounter with the Germans for the possession of Hangard, which changed hands several times. The French were finally the masters.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

Sir Douglas Haig in his midday report says:—Pierce fighting was continued on the battle front northward of La Bassée Canal yesterday evening and at night time. We held the line of the rivers Lys and Lys, and the heavily engaged troops on the left bank of the Saint. Maur at the river crossings.

On the southern flank of the attack, Givenchy, into which the enemy at one time forced his way, was recaptured by the counter-attack later in the day by the 5th Division, which took the village and the high ground.

The enemy's early this morning opened a heavy bombardment on our positions eastward and northward of Armentieres as far as the Ypres-Comines Canal. Fighting is proceeding in the southern portion of this front. Local fighting occurred southward of the Somme yesterday evening. The situation is unchanged.

AMERICAN TROOPS.

American troops are about to participate in the battle.

FRENCH FRONT.

A French communiqué issued at 2.30 a.m. on Wednesday says:—North of Montdidier enemy artillery, violently countered by ours, bombarded several points.

We penetrated the German attack debouching southward of La Bassée Canal. We threw back the enemy across the Oise. A German attack, between Conchy-le-Château and Brancourt.

We repulsed an attempt west of Noyon in the sector of Bernon. There is an intermittent artillery duel on the left bank of the Oise. Batteries caught and dispersed an enemy concentration in the region of Conchy-le-Château.

THE MILITARY POSITION.

Dealing with the military position he pointed out that it was difficult to get a clear picture of the battle front.

The German attack was carried out along a front of 10 miles. The staff and general were naturally concerned concentrating their attention upon the operations of the enemy.

Until that strain was relaxed, it would be difficult to get a clear picture of the battle front.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE'S WARNING

CONSCRIPTION FOR IRELAND

LONDON, April 9.

As the main object was concerned—namely, to secure the Anglo-French alliance—we would be guilty of a great and fatal error if we underestimated the gravity of the prospect. The enemy had captured Givenchy and Hangard, and he had succeeded for the time being in compelling one of our great armies to retire. The Cabinet met every day to consider the situation. Never had so large numbers of men crowded the Chamber in so short a time.

The enemy's claims of capture of Givenchy, Valenciennes, and Hangard were greatly exaggerated. The Ministry of Munitions was not able to replace the guns and machine-guns, but had a very substantial reserve. There was also a great quantity of ammunition here and in France. The same applied to aircraft.

It was impossible at present to tell the British public in checking the balance sheet of the war. The Government was not making it difficult to bring up guns and ammunition. He was confident our army, generals, and soldiers were quite ready for the next encounter.

The Prime Minister referred to the material and dramatic assistance of the American troops. He said that a large American army in France in the spring, but it had taken longer than was anticipated to train these soldiers, and if America wanted to complete her divisions in the spring, she would have to make a great effort.

The National Rule proposal ever submitted to the House of Commons proposed to deprive on all questions relating to the army and navy; so no derogation of any national right. The struggle in which we were engaged was just as much Irish as it was English. (Hear, hear.) It was even more so. It was more Irish, Scotch, and Welsh than English. Ireland.
